1 Statement of Research

On July 3, 2007, (OMITTED) submitted a malicious code sample to VeriSign iDefense for analysis. This sample contained Torpig Trojan, which reportedly targets ABN AMRO bank sites. The client wants to identify behavioral characteristics of the samples submitted; all network traffic, sites impacted and browsers affected (if at all). Contact information for the client is below:

(OMITTED)

VeriSign iDefense validated that the sample submitted is a variant of the Sinowal or Torpig Trojan horse family. This is a well-known information stealing Trojan that targets many financials and is related to the Russian Business Network. There has been an ongoing, active law enforcement investigation regarding this family of code over the last year. VeriSign iDefense will coordinate with law enforcement and anti-virus security professionals to take appropriate post-action following the response.

This variant of Torpig performs actions similar to former variants of this malicious code family. Upon execution, it installs DLLs and injects SVCHOST to actively steal credentials as a user browses the Internet. An upload of stolen credentials occurs immediately.

2 Anti-Virus Scanning Results

The following results only serve as a guideline for identifying known malicious code or the degree of risk associated with a new threat that may be widely undetected by anti-virus software. Scan results may vary based upon specific engines or signature files used in a given scan instance. The following anti-virus programs detected the sample as shown:

Injects SVCHOST to run silently in memory.

Performs the following network activity:

Lenicnt.info is a remote server for hosting files downloaded by the Trojan. Cggtculj.com is a stolen credentials drop site. 194.146.207.133, in the same net block as the former two domains, also communicates with the Trojan.

4 Information Stealing Activity

This Trojan family steals information from browsers, immediately uploading data to a remote server. VeriSign iDefense attempted to prompt the Trojan to steal information and play man in the middle to get additional data by infecting a lab computer and visiting several sites.

This Trojan does target multiple ABN ANBRO servers for information theft. In limited lab tests, VeriSign iDefense confirmed that the Trojan does attempt to communicate with a remote command and control (C&C) server, but did not perform any man-in-the-middle phishing attacks when attempting to log on with invalid credentials to the banking site. A list of trigger strings found in the configuration files does not contain ABN AMRO strings. However, multiple domains affiliated with ABN AMRO do exist in the configuration file for the Trojan. It is likely that the Trojan is designed to steal information or interact with a legitimate session following authentication to the site.

A decryption of the Trojan configuration files shows the following targeted ABN AMRO and subsidiary sites:

1. abnamro.an
2. abnamro.be
3. abnamro.ch
4. abnamro.com
5. abnamro.com.sg
6. abnamro.lu
7. abnamro.nl
8. abnamroprivatebanking.com
9. www.singapore.insight.abnamroprivatebanking.com
10. abnamro
11. abnamro.com
12. lasallebank.com
13. vip.lasallebank.com
14. onlinebanking.lasallebank.com
15. lasallefederal
16. mybank.bybank.it
17. wwws.bancoreal.com.br
18. bancoreal.com.br
19. cashproweb.com
20. cashproweb.com
21. cashproweb

The Trojan contains several strings related to potential trigger words for information theft:

- login
- pswd
- userid
- accountnumber
- passwd
- username
- pop3

Below are examples of how the Trojan manipulates and then steals sensitive information from the client.

eBay Theft

When attempting to log into eBay without legitimate credentials, red text is posted to the page indicating that the information is not valid and to try again. Below is an example of this legitimate error message:

Legitimate eBay Error Prompts the User to Log in Again.

If this variant of Torpig is running on a computer it works as a man in the middle on the local computer to hijack the normal warning message. Instead of a normal error screen, the Trojan creates a page claiming that there is an increase in fraudulent activity, prompting the user to enter the following information:

- First Name
- Last Name
- Date of Birth
- Social Security Number
- Mother's Maiden Name
- E-Mail
- Credit Card Number
- Card Expiration Date
- Card CVC2
- ATM Pin
- Banking Account Number
- Routing Number

The image below shows how the phishing page, created by the Torpig Trojan, appears:

Torgig plays Man in the Middle to Display a Phishing Page to the User.

PayPal Theft

Below is an image of the phishing page displayed by the Trojan when visiting PayPal:

Bank of America Theft

Please enter a valid "Card Number".

The Trojan Interacts with a Bank of America Session to Phish the User.

Stolen credentials are uploaded in real-time, as shown in the image below. A TMP file is used to store stolen credentials on the local computer. Additional TMP files are used to store encrypted URLs targeted by the Trojan. In this instance, $ _2341233.TMP contains stolen data as displayed in the image below:

A TMP file Stores Stolen Data that is Immediately Uploaded to a Drop Site.

5 Targets of Attacks

Two TMP files created by the Trojan are used for storage of encrypted domains targeted by the Trojan, command and control servers, and e-mail accounts potentially related to theft of data or spam. VeriSign iDefense successfully decrypted the configuration data from TMP files as shown in Appendix A.

C&C servers for this Trojan are as follows:

It is possible that this domain, newly registered in May 2007, is a future C&C server to be used as a backup or upgrade in the future.

Information within the configuration files used by the Trojan are grouped by geography.

6 WHOIS Data for Remote Websites

lenicnt.info [194.146.207.220] and cgtculj.com [194.146.207.18] are the primary domains used to host malicious code and interact with the Trojan. Spamhaus blacklist both of these IP addresses for the primary domains. Data also uploads to 194.146.207.133. Bleeding Threats signature that detects this activity is 2400000.

The above domains are all hosted on one server, 194.146.207.133, in Panama registered to a Russian e-mail address. This is the same server as is used to collect stolen information in this attack. WHOIS information varies for these last domains, but are similar as shown with the first domain queried:

7 Concluding Comments

The 194.146.207.18 address used in this attack for communication with an infected computer is the same IP used in a recent MPack attack. The large "Italian MPack" attack leveraged multiple sites, including 194.146.207.18. In that case 194.146.207.18 served as a redirector to a remote hostile MPack attack site. In short, compromised sites hosted an IFrame link that pointed to one of several redirector sites, including 194.146.207.18, which then redirects the browser to an MPack attack site.

Rock Phish, an infamous group responsible for thousands of phishing attacks daily, uses configuration files that leverage the same encoding technique as seen in this Torpig attack. The encoding mechanism is a simple substitution cipher with a unique structure. Each configuration file starts with a C&C server component followed by configuration data like e-mail addresses for phishing or targeted URLs for information theft. It is highly likely that the same individual or group is responsible for both attacks using the same basic techniques.
